

The Bryan Daily Eagle

and Pilot

Vol. XVII. No. 120.

BRYAN, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 24, 1912.

PRICE: $4.00 PER YEAR.

The leading editorial in Tuesday's Eagle says:

"Drinking water should be inspected, and the slaughter houses and methods of handling meats should be given close attention. It has been reported to The Eagle, and we know it is true as we have also seen it, that meats after being slaughtered are hauled to town in wagons that are far from sanitary and without any covering of any kind over it, permitting flies to light on it and the dust and filth of the roads to cover it. If these reports are true, we feel assured that just a word to the butchers would correct it. There is a state law on these matters and it should be lived up to.

"Let's clean up the town, comply with all sanitary laws, rules and regulations, and thereby protect the public health."

Our Market is Sanitary

We have no slaughter pen and filthy wagons.

Our meats come from Swift's great Packing House Ft. Worth and are handled under government supervision and the most sanitary methods are employed.

All the meat is government inspected and bears the inspectors official stamp. Every piece of it is clean wholesome and healthful.

MORE OUTRAGES IN MEXICO

Harrowing Accounts of Cruelties Inflicted by Mexican Bandits.

[By Associated Press.]

Galveston, Texas, April 24.—W. R. M. Lile, American attorney for Honolulu, who was among yesterday's arrivals on the steamer Texas from Vera Cruz, told today of the wife of an old German being repeatedly assaulted by Mexican bandits before the husband's eyes, and was finally killed and her body horribly mutilated.

J. Flexon, an American railroad engineer, asserts he has heard of other cases as bad as that related by Lile. He says that the better class of Mexicans are no better off than foreigners, and that the daughters of Mexican families are carried away for immoral purposes. Soldiers who are recruited from the prisons and then desert are the worst offenders.

Flexon claims some Americans have been unable to leave the country.
